The Commonwealth of Massachusetts
Department of
Corporations and Taxation
State House, Boston

HENRY F. LONG
COMMISSIONER

Jan. 6, 1927.

To the Boards of Assessors.

Your attention is respectfully called to the following memorandum:

Since the passage of the income tax act in 1916, personal taxes upon incomes have, as you know, superseded the former taxes upon intangibles, and the State has assumed the task of their assessment and collection. Under the former regime it was of vital interest to a town or city to keep large taxpayers upon its list of legal residents, in order that this tax might be secured. Under the present law the status of any one individual has but little effect upon the taxes collected by the municipality, the poll tax and a part of the personal property tax being the only forms of tax collected directly by the municipality which are dependent thereon. But there is, of course, an indirect benefit to all the cities and towns in retaining persons of means as residents, because all the net proceeds of the income tax are returned to the municipalities.

This revenue is no longer affected by changes of domicil within the Commonwealth but many questions of domicil outside the State arise, and in the treatment of these questions a full presentation of facts, often involving personal hearings, must be made. In the determination of the questions information in regard to both places of residence,- within and without the State,- is necessary.

In many cases a person who wishes to claim his residence in another State or country notifies you of his intended change of residence and asks you to remove his name from your list of resident taxpayers. In the majority of these cases the change of domicil is clear and not open to doubt and the Commissioner so rules. In some cases, however, the Commissioner, after investigation, may take the position that a new domicil outside the Commonwealth has not been acquired, and that, therefore, under familiar principles, the former domicil continues in force.

If, in such a case, the local board has already passed upon the question and notified the person that it has agreed with his claim and will not assess him in the future, the action of the Department may be made difficult.

Without wishing to interfere with the orderly and expeditious handling of the work of the local boards, which must of necessity pass upon many such questions, I wish to call attention to those cases of change of residence which involve large taxes, and to suggest that decisions in cases which appear to be such may be withheld or postponed, at least until such time as it may seem necessary to act upon them. The notifications may be acknowledged, of course. Further than that, a poll tax assessment may be omitted, if it seems advisable to you. But in case of doubt the Commissioner will be glad to receive and, as soon as possible, to answer any inquiries from you as to our information or attitude in any such case, and any information which you may have in regard to it. These inquiries should probably be confined to the more important cases.

In this way we may secure more co-operation between the several agencies of the State and avoid possible determinations which are in conflict.

Cordially yours,

Commissioner.
